Federico Delrosso

“When I hit upon what I feel is the perfect solution for a project, I get a sudden flash of euphoria, only for fraction of a second, but intense enough. That is what I call reaching the threshold, the one which is linked to a given moment or context, which fuses my previous experiences and to some extent annuls them, creating room for diverse new opportunities to be reconnoitred.

As for designing objects – which differ from architecture with its set of building norms, structural parameters, geographical features, orientation rules – the act is certainly less limited and allows for greater creative flexibility. I’m interested in pinpointing the outer threshold as I reason through the technological and technical implications, or the properties of the materials I’m using, and once this is determined I then set about defining the forms and functions involved.”

“We design for those who share our philosophy of luxury. For me, it’s not about using expensive materials or following trends. Luxury is the feeling of being in a comfortable place.”

Federico Delrosso

house mm

biella - IT

This villa is laid out on a single floor and is characterized by a large transparent volume which unites two apparently distinct bodies, one for the living area and the other for the sleeping quarters.

This transparent area, through which the natural surroundings completely penetrate the house, is the entrance-living area devoted to the most convivial activities of the occupants, enabling them to enjoy the beautiful and natural variations in light during the day.

loft go+jo
milano - IT

The project stems from the renovation of a building previously used to craft works. The specific request, was to extract 2 units of equal surface and features for the clients, 2 brothers. A new metallic axial structure detached from the perimeter walls supports the new mezzanine, which is partially closed by beams/vertical props, which ideally are the continuation of the arrangement of beams of the upper floor, as if the mezzanine was suspended at it. An illusory game that becomes the main feature of the project, that manages spaces and functions.

house af
lessona - IT

For Federico Delrosso, this old farmhouse, built in 1840 by Giovanni Antonio Sella on the hills of Biella in Lessona, proved an excellent opportunity to use his contemporary style, founded on the blending of many materials, to renovate an historic structure while maintaining its architectural past.

loft fd

The project is the restoration of a former factory in the southern part of Milan, once an industrial outer suburb and today a residential district. Twin lofts, with the same design approach as the internal spaces, because they were created dividing a single space lengthwise.

house rv
biella - IT

This project is the result of a complete redevelopment, which extended the existing house, designed by Delrosso's father.

The complexity of the work was bound up with the small size of the lot, which is particularly steep: a constraint and at the same time an interesting challenge, to which the architect found an answer with the creation of new volumes on both the vertical and horizontal axes.

The project's verticality was enhanced with the introduction of a new volume to the south developed over three floors. The top floor is characterized by the absence of the final roof, and the installation of a large solarium, through which one has access to the swimming pool.

la thuille
Les Suches - IT

A mountain house, minimal and perfectly integrated into the Alpine landscape of the Aosta Valley, located at over 2,000 meters high on the slopes of Mont Blanc in the La Thuile valley - Les Souches.

The renovation project of a rustic stone cottage has produced a new compact architectural volume that enhances the expressive power of the dry stone primary structure, typical of high mountain constructions, here certainly reworked.

The building has the primary stone envelope that contains the roof structure, which discharges to the ground on the main front with a vertical scan. The orientation of the building offers the most astonishing views.

villa alce
Biella - IT

Villa Alce, a precious old property from the '60s expanding over an area of about 800 square meters was developed in a hilly area of Cerreto Castello. The project mainly dealt with the restyling of the exterior, interior, and the swimming pool of the Villa.

The entrance that overlooks the entire view of the property urges one to discover the inside.

By closing some outside porches, creating internal extensions, it was possible to add a wellness area consisting of a personal gym, sauna, a Turkish bath, and a relaxation area.

The fundamental element of this villa is the Kitchen, specially designed to meet the specific needs of the client. The extremely functional cooking area beholds a spectacular view of the garden and thanks to the large mirrors, one can appreciate the outdoor terrace adjacent to the kitchen.

teca house

Biella - IT

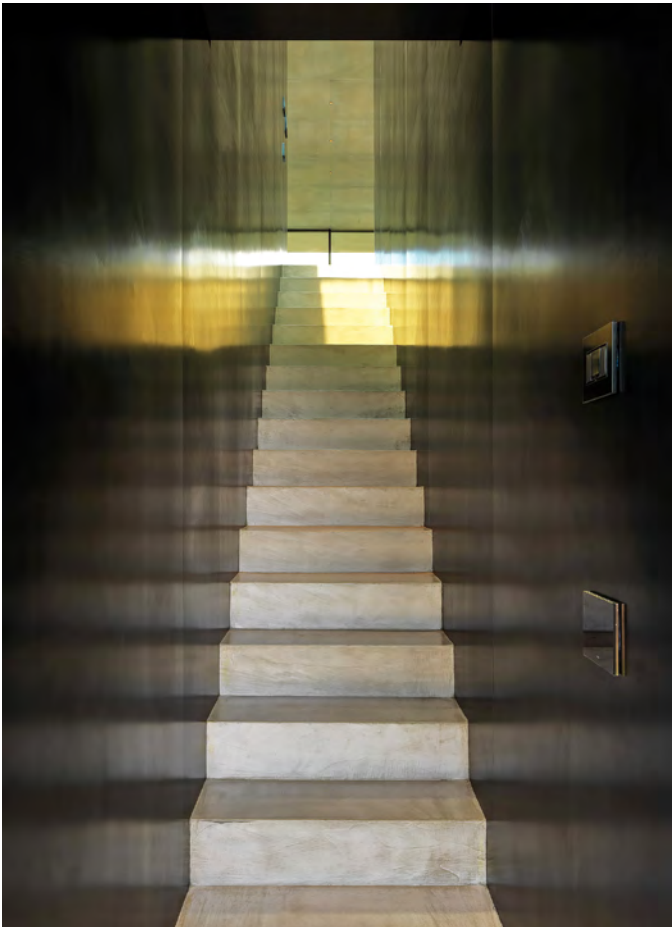

Teca house is a contemporary building, designed with a minimal naturalist approach, built on the green hills of Biella, Italy. Two large horizontal wings suspended in the void rooted in the ground by small agricultural manufacture of which it was desired to preserve traces. A completely openable glass closure that defines the volume and allows the return to dive completely in the surrounding landscape.

Project “teca house” had the purpose of recovering a small rustic building on the Biellese hills and is based on a composite inversion intervention, which leads to outside, dematerializing it, an existing small rustic volume, giving life to a new function on the territory.

villa RL

Key Biscayne, Miami Florida - USA

Villa RL in Key Biscayne area of Miami, Florida is one of many projects of Studio Delrosso' in the United States. "The entire home is conceived as a compact white unit fended vertically with bands of glazing, partially concealed by the overlap of jutting panels that scatter the continuity, creating the impression of a discontinuous surface enclosed only in glass." The overall site plan covers around 450 square meters and consists of a ground storey with living-room and guest suite, whereas the family's private area of three suites is housed on the upper storey.
